

Historical Pageant at Manila Is Vividly Described by Col. Carlisle

MANILA, Feb. 16, 1922. The Manila carnival degenerates credit for many interesting developments and, while it was staged to bring out the commercial and industrial life of the islands, the educational and social side was not overlooked. This historical pageant by the University of the Philippines was alone worth the trip of ten thousand miles and we wish that we could convey to our readers some of the pictures.

In 1571 Manila received Legaspi, who representing Spain, came to rule, and the Historical Pageant, with special music written and arranged by Nicanor Alcantara, professor of the conservatory of music, is centered around the coming of the Spaniards. True to history the conditions and the traditions of the court of the Moro-rajahs, who at that period were in control, lends color and romance.

The pageant opens with two of the Rajah's sentinels, who, having sighted Legaspi's ships, rush to the palace and give the alarm. The royal guards, the bolomen, the artillery-men, the spear and shield-men and the archers, then come rushing in upon the scene and, in their places, ready for action, before the throne in the open court of Rajah Sulliman, who, walking beneath white parasols, the ancient symbol of rank, comes forth followed by six neighboring chiefs, and a retinue of court dependants and slaves.

Then we see the sultan, wife of the Rajah, the princess and ladies in waiting, the cup bearers, court musicians who, having been rudely awakened from their afternoon siesta, pass calmly in upon the scene of the scene and, in their places, ready for action, before the throne in the open court of Rajah Sulliman, who, walking beneath white parasols, the ancient symbol of rank, comes forth followed by six neighboring chiefs, and a retinue of court dependants and slaves.

Radiophone Challenges Movies As Nation's Evening Pastime

NEW YORK, March 30.—The popularity of the motion picture is challenged today for the first time since it gained favor of the public. Its new competitor is the radio pipe.

The popularity of the movie has been greater than that of any other form of entertainment for a number of years. In a brief span of years it has become one of the leading industries of the world.

The popularity of film entertainment is due to its low cost, to the variety of its form and to its informative value.

The movie changed the national and domestic scheme of existence. Families no longer gather about the fireside to read the newspapers and fiction. As soon as the dishes are done, dad and mother and the kids go to the movies.

On the screen they see drama, comedy, news. The great figures of history are visualized. The news of the day is told in more graphic manner than is possible with the written word.

Now the radiophone promises to restore the hearth as the center of the home. Herbert Hoover estimates that 250,000 radiophones have been installed in homes in the last 12 months. That means that more than a million people now derive entertainment from the invisible reaches of the air.

Information is the salt of the human soul, comfort is its next desire. The radiophone will permit dad to sit about home in his old slippers, puffing his pipe while the affairs of the world are brought to him. Mother may receive the latest market prices as she awaits the groceryman to come for her order. Daughter may have dance music by putting on an amplifier.

And the radiophone gives the small boy something to play with which is more than a mere toy.

Considering the rate of growth in the use of the radio in the past year and the low prices at which receiving sets are now selling, the inroad upon the popularity of the movie can be easily reckoned.

RADIO'S ADVANTAGES. The radio goes to the people. There is the chief advantage of the radio as a means of entertainment. The lonely rancher, the farmer's wife, the camper in the wilderness, men engaged in work which confines them to one place but does not occupy their entire attention—these are the ones who will be most entertained by the radio.

With all its advantages the radio probably will never supersede the motion picture as the most popular means of entertainment. The movie brings people together. It sponsors a subtle form of companionship. It takes the rancher, the farmer's wife, the camper and the laborer out of their ordinary existence.

And above all, the eye is more comfortable than the ear in its capacity for learning.

GERMAN-AMERICAN FILMS. A European correspondent of this column writes that Germans are planning to make "American" pictures to compete in the movie theaters of the United States with movies made here. If that is so, the Germans will be battling out of order.

The Germans plan to obtain the same atmosphere that prevails in American pictures by using American players, American clothes and American scenery. The effect of all that will be nullified unless the pictures are directed by Americans.

A few of the German directors are masters of costume spectacle films, but there has not yet been made in Europe a present-day photoplay true to traditions and manners of America.

The difference between films made here and those made in Europe, to the American picture, is the difference between custom-made and ready-to-wear clothes.

and these following traditional custom bring gifts to the Rajahs and in that manner bribe the old chief to give them permission to trade among the people, and we are amused as we think of the past and the present.

By this time the Spaniards have reached shore, the Great Chief Rajah Lakandula goes forth to greet Legaspi and his retinue of followers, gun bearers and distinguished representatives including the ship's crews.

The Spaniards make known their requests to come as friends and stay as friends, and quietly among themselves no doubt agreed to take everything in sight. The sultan receives them in cordial friendly spirit and accedes to their presents and statements as genuine. The feast is ordered, and the fun begins. The Bolomen demonstrate their ancient method of war fare and in like manner the artillery-men and the spear and shield men perform, but the archers with wonderful bows and arrows attract our interest and attention and they hit the bull's eye every time. Then when the old Sulliman chief has sufficiently demonstrated before the Spaniards that they are well prepared to defend themselves before all comers, the ancient Filipino dance, the Kumin-tang, is presented and no people can dance or sing their way into popular applause with a more graceful manner. We gave them round upon round of applause because it was impressive and inspiring, and when we report that perhaps 10,000 people united in this applause, that over 1,000 people participated in the Pageant and that a band of 100 pieces played, you can imagine it was some noise.

The play was held in an open amphitheater built for the occasion at a cost of about 250,000 pesos, which means about $125,000 gold. Legaspi returns the courtesy in royal Spanish manner and then the Governor General holds an informal reception, the leading people in the play are presented, the author is honored, and royalty and the people of every class and kind mingle under the protection of the stars and stripes and we go back into modern life, happy and delighted at the romance of the past. It was a wonderful event and staged and played by an interesting people.

ponent will be the republican choice of that election. Charles R. Davis, republican, has represented the district since 1903.

Mr. Gault has found time from her household duties for she does her own home work—to figure prominently in all forms of women's activities during the past quarter of a century.

She belongs to many patriotic organizations—her ancestors fought in the French and Indian war, in the Revolution, the Civil war, and her own son was an officer in the American Expeditionary force in France, where he was wounded.

Her maternal ancestry includes Grover Cleveland, and on her paternal side she is related to James M. Cox, democratic nominee for president two years ago.

Her father was the late Judge E. St. Julian Cox, one of the leaders of the democratic party in Minnesota for years.

Mrs. Gault resided with her family in Omaha for several years, and there was prominent in club activities, church and charitable work. She served as state secretary of the D. A. R. in Nebraska and from 1910 to 1914 was vice-president general for Nebraska.

During the fight between Mrs. Mathew T. Scott and Mrs. W. C. Storey for the national presidency of the D. A. R. Mrs. Gault presided at one of the national sessions at Continental Hall, Washington, and at that time Associate Justice Lamar of the United States supreme court remarked that she was "a better presiding officer than either Joe Cannon or Champ Clark."

A boxing match was pulled off by two high school boys, Baker and Jones, neither getting the best of the other. There was also a guitar duet by Relsch and Fertig. This was followed by a basket shooting contest, in which the honors went to Young. A dribble race came next and was won by the second team. A basket ball game was held between the first and second teams, and the first team won by 39 to 24 in a hard fought game. This ends the season for the Athletics and some of the boys are not planning to go into the work next year, so the end has come for them in basket ball tournaments. They did mighty good work this year, winning 37 games out of 40.

watched more carefully this summer than Jimmy O'Connell.

For fear you have forgotten, Jimmy O'Connell is the young man for whom John McGraw of the New York Giants paid $75,000 to the San Francisco club.

In a few more weeks the Coast leagues season will be on in full blast. The eyes of the cynical fans will soon be coldly analyzing his work.

Not only will O'Connell be receiving the once over from the home town fans in San Francisco, but all over the United States.

The glare of the sporting spotlight, however, doesn't seem to have changed O'Connell in the least.

When queried as to how he felt about the publicity that had come his way because of the record price McGraw paid for him, he modestly remarked:

"The major league is still one year removed. I am not giving a single thought to the big show. I still have to make good in the minors because I am as yet a minor leaguer."

"I am very glad I didn't get a chance in the National League this year. I am sure to be a much improved ball player in 1923. I really need another year in the minors."

"In addition, by this time next year a lot of the fans will have forgotten all about the $75,000 New York paid for me and won't expect as much when I make my debut in the majors."

That is certainly some sensible reasoning by one of the most advertised young men in the country.

At the Spring Training Camps

When Bob Meusel and Babe Ruth were suspended it was believed that the New York club would not be greatly weakened during the absence of these two stars from the game.

It was believed the added pitching strength would carry the burden imposed by their loss.

I really thought that Bobby Roth would step into Meusel's place and deliver with a vengeance. Roth is a great ball player if he wants to be. He is the type that goes great guns for a limited time.

I thought Roth would fill the bill because it is usually in the pinch that he does his best. However, for some reason Roth has been suspended. He can't be figured on.

In many quarters there is an increasing belief that the loss of Ruth and Meusel is going to prove a much greater handicap than it first seemed.

In Black

NEW YORK, Mar. 30.—New York. In the main, is yet faithful to her black. Vainly do modistes try to lure her from sombre paths to those of sapphire, fuchsia, petunia and glowing flame.

"I will have that frock—but in black," says Madame, and the modiste sighs, puts the glorious colors away and begins the model in black.

But Madame makes up for the somberness of her gown with the brilliance of her jewels! Her arms are literally ablaze with bracelets some of them wide dog collar bands of seed pearls, chip diamonds and black enamel. Others are fascinating bands of natural color, flowers done in ivory and fastened together with slim bands of gold and silver.

The vogue for bracelets comes of course with the sleeveless gown. The graceful gown shown might be effectively fashioned of black velvet with collar, cuffs and flower of mulberry. It might also be done in gray with petunia.

CURED BY A NATIVE HERB
On board a vessel bound for India recently a man was bitten by a poisonous reptile; both the ship doctor and a famous surgeon failed to control the poison fast spreading through his system.

In a day the vessel reached port. An Indian medicine man was sent for, who produced a native herb which quickly allayed the poison and the man's life was saved.

Roots and herbs are nature's assistants in combating disease. That well-known medicine for ailments peculiar to women, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, is produced from roots and herbs, possessing medicinal properties of great value in the treatment of such ailments.

This is proved by the letters of recommendation we are continually publishing in this paper for it.—Adv.

WOMAN CANDIDATES CAN FIND TIME FOR HOME AND POLITICS

Mayor of Minnesota Town Refutes Claim That Home Is Neglected.

ST. PETER, Minn., March 30.—Mrs. A. K. Gault, mayor of St. Peter and Minnesota's first woman aspirant for election to congress, wants to "prove that women can find time to attend to other things without neglecting their home."

These "other things" in her case include active participation in matters, political and hereditary trait, perhaps, for her sister, Mrs. Irene C. Bush, city prosessor of Ashland, Neb., seeks to represent the Fourth Nebraska district in congress.

When Mrs. Gault announced her determination to seek the democratic nomination for congress from the third Minnesota district, she acted in response to insistent urging of her friends, including many women, that she try for some important political post.

Just a year ago she was elected mayor of St. Peter on a reform ticket, defeating strong opposition. She stopped the "whimmy" and took other questionable motions out of public dances; then she licensed soft drink establishments and caused removal of the screens from their windows.

"Equal opportunity for all and the same laws for rich and poor alike"—that is her simple platform for her contest for congress. If she survives the June primary, her opportunity will be the republican choice of that election. Charles R. Davis, republican, has represented the district since 1903.

Mr. Gault has found time from her household duties for she does her own home work—to figure prominently in all forms of women's activities during the past quarter of a century.
